

Introduction.

In gases the intermolecular forces are very weak and its molecule may fly apart in all directions. So the gas is characterized by the following properties.

- (i) It has no shape and size and can be obtained in a vessel of any shape or size.
- (ii) It expands indefinitely and uniformly to fill the available space.
- (iii) It exerts pressure on its surroundings.